Quick Facts about Young Voters in North Carolina: The Midterm Election Year 2006

By Mark Hugo Lopez, Karlo Barrios Marcelo, and Jared Sagoff¹
Updated June 2007

The 2006 midterm election was the second major election in a row that saw an increase in the electoral participation of young people ages 18-29. Between 2002 and 2006, the percentage of eligible young people who voted increased by 3 percentage points to 25 percent, the single largest increase among all age groups nationally.² Similarly, while youth electoral participation improved between 2002 and 2006 nationally, in North Carolina, the youth voter turnout rate rose 3 percentage points from 18 percent in 2002 to 21 percent in 2006. Overall, North Carolina ranked 40th (tied with AR and HI) among all states and the District of Columbia in 2006, up from 44th in 2002, yet was four percentage points lower than the nation as a whole.

This fact sheet reports the characteristics of young voters for the state of North Carolina, including estimates of the number of young voters, and voter turnout rates in 2006 and 2002 for various sub-groups of young people.

Youth Turnout Estimates, 2006

In 2006, a midterm election year, an estimated 1.2 million young people in North Carolina were eligible to vote in U.S. elections. Table 1 shows voting statistics for the years 2006 and 2002.

Voter Turnout Rates in 2006 and 2002 Among Eligible Young Citizens, Ages 18-29

Table 2 displays voter turnout rates for various groups of young people ages 18 to 29 in 2006 and 2002 in North Carolina. In 2006, voter turnout among many youth groups in North Carolina was up slightly over 2002. White non-Hispanics (up 7 points), individuals with some college experience (up 6 points), and single men (6 points) were some of the groups to make gains over their 2002 levels.
